First industrial fair opens in Irbid

By Mohammad Ayish Special to the Jordan Times

IRBID, Nov. 21 - His Royal Highness Crown Prince Hassan this morning opened the first Jordanian industrial fair at Yarmouk University.

"I believe that the visual side of the industrial experience is very basic in deepening the concept of belongingness," the Crown Prince said at a press conference which he held after touring the various sections of the fair.

He added that in the 1970s. emphasis was laid on rehabilitating industrial investment in Jordan which was confined to individual initiatives as in the fields of electricity and solar energy.

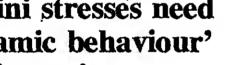

He also called for cooperation among all economic sectors to bring the experience of the 1970s to a more advanced level. "I think that our experience with heavy industries such as potash and fertilisers has become a threshold for industrial development in Jotdan this century.

At the outset of the opening ceremony, Amman Chamber of Industry Director Ali Dajani reviewed the development of industrial fairs in Jordan. He said the first industrial fair was held at the Muslim Educational College in Amman in 1952.

The committee members have taken a number of decisions pertaining to projects in the occupied West Bank and the distribution of financial assistance covered by a special fund for the welfare of Arab employees and workers in the West Bank and the Gaza Strip.

Heading the Jordanian side to the meeting was Minister of Occupied Territories Affairs Hassan Ibrahim and the Palestinian side was led by Mr. Hamed Abn Sitta, member of the Palestine Liberation Organisation's Executive Committee.

Arab foreign ministers FEZ, Morocco, Nov. 21 (R) -Arab foreign ministers meet in Fez tomorrow to set an agenda for Wednesday's Arab summit when the Saudi Arabian Middle East peace plan is likely to dominate discussions.

The plan, proposed by Crown Prince Fahd in August, has caused a controversy in the Arab World by its apparent suggestion of recognising Israel and the summit has been widely labelled as the most important in years.

The two-day foreign ministers meeting is likely to see procedural manoeuvring by supporters and opponents of the plan, Arab diplomats said.

The Saudis will seek backing for their eight-point project, which calls for Israeli withdrawal to pre-1967 borders and creation of a Palestinian state, while opponents will try to head off any decision, the diplomats said.

The Saudi proposals, which support the right of states of the region to live in peace, bave been referred to the summit by the six-. nation Gulf Cooperation Council, shelve a proposal to have majority decisions binding on all members. Plans for the foreign ministers to discuss the proposed change in regulations were scrapped and their meeting, tentatively scheduled to start today, was fixed instead for tomorrow.

The other major topic expected for the summit will be the future of relations with Egypt -- expelled from the Arab League in 1979 for making separate peace with Israel - following the death of President Anwar Sadat last month.

Also to be discussed is rising tension in South Lebanon, where the PLO has accused Israel of a military build-up threatening a ceasefire arranged between them in July.

Arab diplomatic sources said other issues will range from the announced U.S.-Israeli strategic cooperation agreement to Arab start in Fez tomorrow. relations with Europe, the U.S. and African states.

The Steadfastness and Confrontation Front, grouping Libya, Syria, Algeria, South Yemen and the PLO, has been expected to fight the plan, but a meeting of front foreign ministers in Aden carlier this week made no mention of it in its final communique, suggesting possible disagreements. But the dispute between the U.N. and Maj. Haddad's forces continued over a hill near the village of A-Tiri in the central sector, where UNIFIL is blockading a militia post set up eight days ago after three militiamen were killed by a landmine.

Maj. Haddad said the mine was laid by Palestinians who infiltrated through U.N. lines and he demanded the peacekce ping force take measures to stop the commandos.

The militiamen on the A-Tiri hill dominate the area but are surrounded by UNIFIL soldiers who ordered them to leave and have built fortifications in the area.

Militiamen cut off U.N. headquarters at Naqura on the Mediterranean earlier this week but withdrew on Thursday.

Polish students continue strikes

WARSAW, Nov. 21 (R) --Newspaper vendors and deliverymen returned to work in most parts of Poland today but students and farmers continued occupation strikes across the country.

Students were occupying about une-third uf Poland's 105 universities and colleges and farmers were staging sit-in strikes in at least two cities.

The independent students' union said the campus protest would go on until the union was sure a higher education law submitted to parliament yesterday contained all the concessions granted by the government earlier this year.

The students have accused the government of rowing back on some of the concessions.

The authorities agreed yesterday to the students' main demand for new elections to the post of rector.

BEIRUT, Nov. 21 (A.P.) - Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini said today Islamic regulations must be implemented in Iranian jails and violations of prisoners' rights must be stopped "in whatever manner they may be." Tehran radio said. The broadcast, monitored in Beirut, gave no indication what sort of "violations" might be taking place in Iranian prisons, but Khomeini's admonition came at a time when his fundamentalist regime is coming under increasing attacks from opponents who cha-ree that prisoners are being mistreated and tortured for their anti-Khomeini sentiments. Tehran radio said Khomeini met today with Chief Justice Ayatollah Abdul Karim Ardabili and members of the Supreme Judicial Council to talk about "the importance of carrying out the law in prisons, and prevention of a violation of Islamic rights in jails."

It was the first time in recent months that Khomeini's meetings with judicial authorities were reported by the state-owned news media. On Friday the Paris office of Mujahedcen-e-Khalq guerrilla leader Massoud Rajavi claimed that two pregnant women were recently executed in Iran. A Rajavi spokesman in a telephone call to the Associated Press in Beirut claimed two female Mujahedeen members were five and six months pregnant when they were executed.

Tehran radio also said Mr. Salim Kermani, a Majlis (parliament) deputy from the central Iranian city of Kerman who was appointed by Khomeini to oversee matters in Tehran's Evin Prison, met with Ayatollah Hussein Ali Montazeri, Khomeini's heir apparent.

The prison was built in a North Tehran suburb during the reign of the late Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi. During the Shah's regime it became notorious for tortures allegedly carried out by the Shah's dreaded secret police, SAVAK.

Montazeri was also quoted by the radio as warning Iranian youth "to stay away from group intrigues" and to remain united.

He said "group intrigues have always destroyed the revolutions of the world." He warned that if the country's

After the hearing, defence lawyers told reporters the euphoria probably stemmed from the fact it was the first time the defendants had seen each other since their arrest.

One man in the dock was a blind mufti Sheikh Omar Abdul Rahman, who, according to the indictment, was the spiritual leader of the group. Several times he asked

Foreign correspondents were taken to the spot by military buses and thoroughly searched.

The indictment, which was read to the court, divided the accused up into several groups of assassins, accomplices and conspirators.

It accused Islambouli and three others with killing Mr. Sadat, who died in a hail of grenade and machinegun fire during the Oct. 6 parade.

The indicoment said Faraj, a young engineer, urged them to carry out the assassination in the name of Islam. Most of the others on trial were identified as students who assisted the killers by providing ammunition and "espoused extremist ideas which incited the killing of the head of state."

New encyclopaedia on Palestinian folklore

By Mohammad Ayish Special to the Jordan Times

FOR MANY years, most of the literature about Palestinian folklore had been confined to the writings of foreign tourists and tesearchers who came to visit the Middle East or do field work in it. But from now on, researchers into Palestinian folklore will not have problems getting into the roots of that heritage, thanks to a five-part aimed at introducing Palestinian encyclopaedia that has been just . life, with all its folklore aspects, completed in Arabic by Nimr Sarban after 16 years of work.

'My interest in Palestinian folklore started in a casual way. In 1965, I was asked to write a radio script on Palestinian village life for the Voice of Palestine programme, which was broadcast by Jordan Radio from Jerusalem," Mr. Sarhan said. "The programme which, at the time, was unfortunately confined to folk music," he added.

> He also told the Jordan Times that though the programme was never broadcast, he believed that he had accomplished something in terms of gathering information and research on Palestinian folklore

After 16 years of work on Palestinian folklore, Mr. Sarban said that his mission has not been completed. "Well, I would say the first stages of my work were those of an amateur, in terms of data gathering and the classification of information. I also was not fully aware of what I was after," he added arts and traditional beliefs. The verbal arts include proverbs, popular sayings, tolk wisdom and songs. The material arts include handicrafts -- embroidery or other traditional arts - that were done by the less-developed social groups.

The chandelier which was used by the rich people in Palestine would not be considered as part of folklore because of the limited scope of its use," he said. "In contrast, we would consider lamps in the villages as an important part of handicrafts that were productive on a large scale in Palestine." he added.

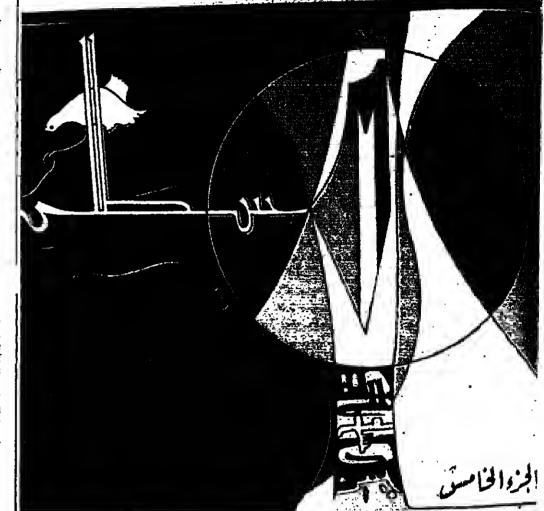

The traditional beliefs comprise the people's views of the universe and life, as well as the myths and religious rituals involved.

Mr. Sarhan's Palestinian Folklore Encyclopaedia has drawn more interest in this part of the Palestinian culture. This year, the First of July was declared Palestinian Folklore Day to acquaint others with Palestinian culture. For Mr. Sarhan, the initiation of that day was important because it would give foreigners the chance to know the Palestinian folklore by visiting exhibitions that have been held in Europe and the United States. These exhibitions. Mr. Sarhan said, would also refute Zionist claims abroad that most of the Palestinian folkiore has its Judaic origins.

The reclassification and review of the five-volume Palestinian Folklore Encyclopaedia will be done by a committee of 27 people from Palestine and other parts of the Arab World, Mr. Sarhan could not specify how much time this work would take, but he recommended that once the final edition of the encyclopaedia is completed, it should be republished

AMMAN, Nnv. 21 - A delegation representing the British Overseas Development Administration (ODA), due to arrive in Amman on Tuesday, will discuss with members of the National Planning Council the uses to which a forthcoming £8 million Britisb loan will be put. The loan, which is earmarked for British goods and services. constitutes Britain's contribution to the 1981-85 five year plan, and suggestions for its use include helping tn fund water development projects, the expansion of rural electricity services or a government poultry slaughterbouse.

The three-member delegation, beaded by Jordan Desk Officer Geraint Roberts and including an ODA economist, Mr. John Roberts (formerly a member of the Middle East Development Division) and an engineering adviser, Mr. Collin Ellis, will be accompanied by Jordanian authorities on visits to view and monitor existing ODA projects in the country. These comprise an electrification project at Irbid, and the construction both of workshops for the Natural Resources Authority and of a marketing centre at Wadi Al Yabes for the Jordan Valley Authority (JVA). The ODA also has a minor share in the Agaba water supply project, piping water from Qa Al Disi for domestic use and for the fertiliser complex in the town.

Future plans for the eight British technical co-operation officers hased in Jordan will also be a subject of discussion between the ODA and the Jordanian authorities.

The delegation's leader, who is due to leave on Dec. 3 - after the other members, -- will overlap his stay with a week-long visit to the country, starting on Nov. 29, by a two-member delegation from the Tropical Products Institute (TPI), a fully funded department of the ODA.

The TP1 representatives, who are both post-harvest specialists. will be offering free and expert consultancy services to the JVA in the course of monitoring the Wadi Al Yabes project.

cribing the debate and voting on a resolution calling for U.N. aid to the Palestinian people strikes us as a timely case study in the psychology of international treatment of the Palestinian issue.

The resolution concerned is not, in any striking respect, very different from other declarations of world bodies calling for assistance to peoples in distress. But the United States could hardly bring itself to vote in the affirmative, considering Israel's opposition, and the U.S. delegate explained his country's negative vote by pointing to alleged "extraneous political elements.

Without difficulty, one can conclude that the "elements" in question are the words: "the Palestine Liberation Organisation, the representative of the Palestinian people." The United States, which refuses to recognise or talk to the PLO, and sometimes seems even to regret that the Palestinian people exist, could not go on record as favouring United Nations dealings with that organisation. But what are the diabolical political implications we are told the resolution contains? In what way are they "extraneous"? And who, after all, is responsible for the overheated political atmosphere that prevails in discussions such as these?

The PLO is recognised and accepted as the representative of the Palestinians by the great majority of countries, so there is nothing illogical or particularly provocative in their referring to it as such in a U.N. resolution. Possibly the inclusion was thought necessary because if the agency to be involved had not been specified then Israel would have found it easier to block the resolution's implementation -- as it is threatening to do anyway. But in any case, the American objection conjures up visions of a U.S. vote against earthquake relief to homeless people in Naples, just because a mention of the Italian government is an "extraneous political element."

Friday's vote might not even have been noteworthy to the press, were it not for the politicisation of what is really only an issue of humanity -- certainly not the tault of the Palestinians themselves. And it is that politicisation that is responsible for the hesitancy of countries like Britain, whose delegate found herself searching for loopholes to justify her country's abstention.

corn or other grains failed to be reached in nearly every Soviet bloc nation this year, leading to open display of frank criticism of agricultural practices.

Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev this week acknowledged another poor harvest, and criticised Soviet economic planners for continued "hitches" and failed economic reforms. The result of the poor harvests has been more emphasis on small private farms in some Soviet bloc nations.

Czechoslovakia, departing from past practice, has told private farmers they can sell their produce openly, and do not have to pay taxes on their earnings.

Romania, already short of bread, has urged citizens to plant gardens wherever they can Unfavourable weather and other factors have often brought poor harvest for the Soviets and their allies. But officials this year seem conscious that Poland's unrest began with food shortages.

"Harvests have been moderate," says Wilhelm Kosek, an analyst at the U.S. embassy here. "But with Poland staring at everyone, they've caused greater worry this year."

The concern was demonstrated by the added attention given to agriculture in the region's stateontrolled press in recent months. In Romania, President Nicolae Ceausescu has been prominently www in the press touring agrcultural areas and warning of lax mrk habits on state and cooperative farms.

In September Mr. Ceausescu alled for a change of attitude toward farming, which he indicated was being looked down upon in Romania. He said even h-level agricultural officials should be made to work on farms.

ARAB PRESS COMMENTARY

The Eternal Truth

AL RA'I: The Arabs have repeatedly declared that the return of Jerusalem to Arab sovereignty is the cornerstone in any just and comprehensive solution that can establish peace and security in the Middle East. The Arabs have presented irrefutable proof confirming the Arab right in the Holy City and, therefore, they have always been certain that their stand is very clear.

One finds it difficult to explain President Reagan's recent statement on Jerusalem in which he prefers to keep both parts of Jerusalem under Israeli sovereignty. One cannot also ascribe this to the lack of efforts to explain the Jerusalem issue and stress Arab sovereignty over the city. The U.S. president is fully aware of the Arab stand on Jerusalem and on United Nations Security Council Resolution 242.

Does President Reagan's statement mean that the United Sta-tes retracts its stand on the United Nations Security Council resolution? Does this mean that the United States approves of force as a legitimate means to annex other people's lands contrary to all international laws, traditions and resolutions? Does this also mean that the United States does not want to see any efforts exerted to reach a just and comprehensive settlement, including the Saudi peace plan and the European initiative?

Arab Jerusalem is an occupied Arab territory that no-one has the power to grant to Israel. Arab Jerusalem is the crux of the issue. The issue can never be solved and peace and security can never be established while the City of Peace lies in chains.

This is the truth that the Arabs have always stressed. This is the truth that no statement by any source can change.

Rejection of Arab, Islamic demands

AL DUSTOUR: U.S. President Reagan's statement supporting the idea of a "united Jcrusalem" under Israeli sovereignty is hound to push Arab-U.S. relations again to the dangerous edge they reached during the former U.S. administration which indulged in supporting Israel and failed to adopt a balanced policy on the Middle East issue.

Despite the White House attempt to stress that Reagan's statement does not mean a change in U.S. policy, it is clear that the flaw in this contradiction in U.S. policies is their determination to support Israel and deceive the Arabs. Arabs and Muslims do not consider Jerusalem just a place to pray in. Jerusalem is connected with the very core of the Islamic faith. The annexation of Jerusalem is part of the Zionist scheme to devour the West Bank and Gaza Strip. Menachem Begin has never denied this and has publicly declared it and is working to achieve it.

For them it is the CIOINDEST ISSU in an eight-point Middle East peace plan which Saudi Arabia intends to put before this year's Arab summit opening next Wednesday in the historic Moroccan city of Fez.

Formal adoption of the plan at the Fez gathering, which the official Saudi Radio last week described as "one of the most important summit conferences ever to be held by Arab leaders," could mark a turning-point in the 33year-old Middle East crisis.

But, according to Arab sources here, critics of Riyadh's proposals will be attempting to ensure that no binding decision on them is taken.

Arab foreign ministers will begin debating the issues on Sunday, prior to the four-day summit. Saudi Arabian Crown Prince Fahd launched the plan in August in the form of eight principles which, he said, were a synthesis of United Nations resolutions on the Middle East.

They call for Israeli withdrawal to pre-1967 frontiers, and the crethe Arab World to include Israel. After a slow start the plan has become the hottest talking point in the Middle East. The six-nation Gulf Cooperation Council last week recommended it to the Fez summit, but most other Arab governments have been chary of committing themselves one way or the other so far.

Any concerted opposition to the plan is likely to come from the Steadfastness and Confrontation Front, grouping Syria, Libya, Algeria, South Yemen and the Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO).

Libya vigorously opposes the plan, but widely divergent views have come from within the PLO, whose leader Yasser Arafat has praised its positive aspects while some of the commando groups have loudly denounced the Saudi initiative.

While some rejectionists oppose ever recognising Israel, others argue that this moment is the wrong time.

been understood unanimously in superiority over them. Israel, he noted, had dismissed the Fahd proposals out of band.

Supporters of the plan, however, are likely to argue that since it has been well received in Western Europe, and even attracted cautious interest in the U.S., agrcement by the Arabs to recognise Israel could persuade the Western World to bring pressure on the Zionist state. Syrian and Palestinian sources said the aim of the plan's opponents was to avert a decision on it at the summit in such a way as not to anger Saudi Arabia, an important financial backer of both Syria and the PLO.

The Beirut daily As Safir said last week that two stalling proposals were being considered.

One was to urge Saudi Arabia not to submit the plan, to avoid a damaging split at the summit where only unanimous decisions are binding. The others was to hog down the plan in a sub-committee which would study all Middle East initiatives.

what to do about Egypt following the assassination of President Anwar Sadat on Oct. 6.

Egypt, suspended from the 22-member Arab League in 1979 for signing a treaty with Israel under the U.S.-sponsored Camp David accords, bas not been invited to Fez.

While the Arab World would like to mend fences with Egypt, the most populous Arab state, it can hardly do so as long as Cairo is ' actively pursuing the Camp David process with Israel.

Diplomats here said the most probable course for the Arabs would be to wait and see what happens after Israel hands back the last third of the Sinai Peninsula to Egypt next April, as laid down by the Camp David accords.

EEC role in Sinai force

The Arab World has objected strongly to proposals by four European states -- Britain, France, Italy and the Netherlands -- to take part in a U.S.-organised force to patrol the Sinai after the Israeli

League members. Other issues

Also widely denounced by the Arabs is the recently announced strategic cooperation agreement between the U.S. and Israel, while some of the Arab leaders are hound to raise the question of the current American military excrcises in Egypt, which are being extended later to Sudan, Oman and Somalia.

Lebanon has obtained a prnmise that its problems will be the subject of the first summit session. An Arab League committee involving Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and Syria has been mediating in the Lebanese crisis since June.

Other topics likely to come up include the Western Sahara --Algeria and Libya, which support Polisario guerrillas fighting Morocco for the independence of the of the counter-revolutionary sitterritory, have been invited to Fez and the Iran-Iraq war.

American offer of nuclear tradeoff in Europe: image issue for Reagan, nonsense for Brezhnev

By Barry Schweid

WASHINGTON - U.S. President Ronald Reagan is trying to ease European jitters and take the propaganda initiative away from Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev by proposing wholesale cutbacks in superpower nuclear arsenals.

The proposal may be too sweeping to succeed, at least immediately. Former president Jimmy Carter failed when his call for deep slashes in 1977 was rejected by the Soviet Union out of hand.

But whatever the outcome, Mr. Reagan is trying to establish his commitment to impose controls on the nuclear arms race. At the same time, he could be trying to brighten his image around the world and stiffen the backs of the allies.

As a presidential candidate, Mr. Reagan had to fight charges that he might be quick on the trigger. Recent talk about the spectre of limited nuclear war in Europe has revived the image problem. The Reagan administration's first round of negotiations with the Soviets opens in two weeks and Mr. Brezhnev is about to make a bigh-profile visit to West Germany, a bedrock of the NATO alliance and the focal point of anti-nuclear sentiment.

Mr. Brezhnev has already rejected, in . advance, any proposal that the Soviet Union should remove its SS-20s in return for a NATO decision not to deploy the Pershing II and Cruise missiles.

In an interview with the West German magazine "Der, Spiegel" and referring to the theatre nuclear weapons negotiations slated to open in Geneva on Nov. 30, Mr. Brezhnev said:

"As the talks are drawing nearer, demands are being made ever more often by the U.S. side (and at a rather high level) for a special approach to the United States. Rather curious preliminary conditions are being formulated ... (that) the scope of the talks should be limited to Soviet medium range missiles which should be dismantled in return for U.S. missiles to be deployed in Europe."

"Those in the United States who advance these kind of proposals apparently do not for a minute expect that the Soviet Union might agree to them."

"Most probably the authors of such proposals do not really want talks, let alone successful talks. What they really need is a breakdown of the talks, which they can use as a sort of justification for continuing the planned arms race, for turning Western Europe, as planned, into a launching pad for new U.S. missiles tra-ined on the U.S.S.R."

The NATO countries broke out with a severe case of nerves after Reagan told a group of editors last month that "I could see where could have an escalation of tactical weapons against troops in the field without it bringing either one of the major powers into pushing the button."

Many Europeans were already upset by the NATO decision to deploy 572 U.S. Pershing II and Cruise missiles in Western Europe. In fact, to get the allies to agree to accept the weapons, the United States promised to first try to negotiate a way out with the Soviets.

Western, Europeans were worried about the Soviet missiles trained on them and feared the deployment beginning in 1983 was like waving a red flag in front of the Russian bear,

The concern raised by Mr. Reagan's statement grew when Secretary of State Alexander. Haig told a Senate committee this month that NATO had a contingency for firing a nuclear warning shot if the Soviets launched an invasion of Western Europe.

Mr. Brezhnev seized on Mr. Reagan's remarks to demand the president make .clear that any notion of a nuclear exchange is "criminal." Mr. Reagan accused the Soviet leader of" gross distortions." U.S. Secretary of Defence Caspar Weinberger tried, meanwhile, to take the heat off the Haig's testimony by denying NATO has a contingency plan for a demonstration nuclear blast. But, through it all, the administration seemed to be on the defensive.

With Mr. Brezhnev due to begin a visit to Bonn on Sunday, and with the administration's first negotiations with the Soviets to start Nov. 30, the time was right for a major Reagan speech.

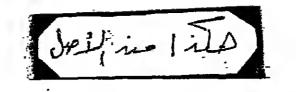

The NATO decision to deploy the new U.S. missiles came from West Germany. Chancellor Helmut Schmidt was concerned about his countrys vulnerability to a speedily mounting array of Soviet SS-20 missiles. Basing the missiles in Western Europe, he reasoned, would prove the United States was ready to rescue its allies in case of attack.

But the Brezhnev visit also gives the Kremlin an opportunity to play on German fears, while encouraging politicians on Mr. Schmidt's left in their assertions that relying on the United States is unwise.

Model Modena feels the chill of harsh economic autumn

By Rupert Cornwell

MODENA: "If Modena goes under, then Italy will too," claims Mr. Mario del Monte, its Communist mayor.

Happily, it should be said at once, there are no conclusive signs that either Modena, or the country as large will meet such a fate. But of the Italy which didn't make daily headlines of terrorism, crisis and disorder. But now simple statistics have finally wrenched it out of that fortunate anonymity. Modena's blend of a rich agricul-ture and thriving industry have made it Italy's richest province alongside Milan.

At the same time, Modena and its province are paradoxically the supreme redoubt of Italian communism. In the city of PCI, the Italian Communist Party, won almost 53 per cent of the vote at the June 1980 local elections. In some outlying centres its share touched 70 per cent.

The contradiction is apparent rather than real. Mr. del Monte likes to tell the story of a promment textiles industrialist in Carpi, 12 miles from Modena and one of Europe's biggest knitwear centres. In despair at the persistent communist sympathies of his workers, he decided to give two busloads of them paid holidays every summer in the Soviet Union, in the hope that a taste of real socialism would teach them the folly of their ways.

The meo returned somewhat sbocked by the backwardness of much of the USSR and in the best Italian fashion debated the problem endlessly. But nothing changed and today Carpi is a town whose dominant textiles industry operates of exemplary capitalist munes and blessed by a perfect belance between city and counpryside. "Other places." says Mr. Ger-mano Bugarelli, former mayor and now responsible for economic planning in Emilia Romagna, "have industry as good or better than Modena's or agriculture as rich, but nowhere has the same combination." The city's population has doubled to 180.000 in 20 years, but the balance miraculously remains.

The lesson to be drawn from Modena is not to change a winning formula. The Communists hold political and economic power -largely through the co-operatives which dominate agriculture and construction. "Here the only mul-

The result is the celebrated "Emilian model" of economic development, based on small companies, heavily export orientated, flexible and technologically innovative -- thanks mainly to the tight personal contacts which flourish in the area's small communities.

This structure, a blend of Communist dominated co-operatives and 1,700 private industrial coocerns employing an average of 45 people each, has proved itself much more suitable for Italy in the sales of $160 million a year. 1970s and early 1980s than the italism in Modeoa, not just to struggling giants of Milan, Turin promote it as a national showcase and Genoa in the north. for enlightened management by ages. Modena is compact, as mte-The PCI has used its influence grated as those medieval comto ensure more orderly unions than in other industrial areas, especially the north, although Communist officials deny it.

But Italy's economic difficulties are now presenting the biggest challenge yet to the Modena model. The province's total exports last year of L2,304 billion ($2 billion) were drawn from ceramics (based at Sassuolo), textiles and knitwear (at Carpi), engineering products ranging from cars to machine tools, and agriculture, notably fruit, wine and preserves. Some of these are facing severe difficulties.

Carpi, once the byword for the Italian textile industry's success, is in deep trouble as new competitors both in the Third World and the developed world emerge. Modena's farmers are no less affected than anyone else by the growing discrepancies and imper-fections of the EEC's Common Agricultural Policy.

Ceramic tiles manufacturers are battling against a slump in overseas demand. Export were down 20 per cent in volume in the first quarter of this year. The chronic troubles of the domestic building industry and Rome's inability to forge an energy policy worthy of the name are also damaging the ceramics industry.

These difficulties are made worse by inflation and debt financing, which have pushed the cost of bank borrowing up to 25 or 30 per cent. Invesiment has declined, while news of 400 impending layoffs in the ceramics sector came as a nasty surprise in a province where full employment is the

Karpov: 'I have played enough with Korchnoi'

MERANO, Nov. 21 (A.P.) -World chess champion Anatoly Karpov said today he douhted that he would play Viktor Korchnoi again, and dodged a question about whether be would ask for the release of Korchnol's wife and son by the Soivet Union.

"I have played enough with Mr. Korchnoi," Karpov told a victory press conference a day after he clinched his title defence with a decisive sixth win.

Karpov, the 30-year-old pride nf Soviet chess, beat Korchnoi 6-2 in an 18-game match in this onrthern Italian mountain resort. In 1978, he beat Korchnoi for the world title 6-5 in 32 games.

At one point, the head of Korchoors delegation Alhan Brodbeck asked Karpov if he would petition Soviet president Leonid Brezhnev for the release nf Korchoni's family, barred by Soviet authorities from emigrating and jnining the Soviet defector in Switzerland.

"That question does not need an answer," Karpov replied. Asked if he was afraid nf rising, 18-year-old Soviet chess expert Garry Kasparov, the champion replied "I am not afraid nf anyone if I am in good fighting trim."

Pakistan fell only 18 runs sbort of the West Indian total of 245, which was boosted by a dashing century by npener Gordon Greenidge.

Pakistan must improve its fielding if it is to beat Australia. Captain Javed Miandad hlamed today's loss on slack and sloppy outfield play which gave the West Indians 13 sundries, all of which were leg-byes. "But I've spoken to the boys

Apart from Lillee, Australia will be without middle-order batsman Graham Yallop, who has been forced out of the side because nf a stress fracture of a vertehrae in the lower back.

Yallop, who replaced Martin Kent in the Australian side in Perth last week, will be replaced by South Australian Rick Darling.

The 24-year-old Darling, who made an impressive 88 against the West Indies last weekend, has played in 14 tests and his attacking hatting and superh cover fielding is suited to one day matches. Australia will rely on captain family car Introducing a The Renault 9 next in line

By Michel Richard

Four metres long, four doors, room for five passengers, five to seven horse-power according to the particular model, a speed of more than 140 kilometres per hour and a tiny appetite - between five and six litres per 100 km at 90 km per hour: this is Renault's latest "baby", the R 9.

The arrival of this car on the market is a major event which no automobile constructor dares to look at without suspicion and wariness. For the R 9 is an important wager for the Renault state mangement, and the French national firm does all in its power to win its agers. Everything began with the Renault 5". This remarkable little car, launched on the market ten people like it. By itself, it holds 16 objective. per cent of the French market, or "Abroa 300,000 vehicles; its exports are remarkably high and it is still being lurned out at the rate of 3,000 cars per day.

But the day comes when the clients of the R 5 (like those of other small cars, including foreign, of the same type) feel a bit cramped inside. Their family has grown up, and this where things can go wrong, for such clients don't necessarily remain faithful to Renault. For the R 14, that raiber plump car launched to succeed the R 5, has attracted only a moderate number of clients.

With the R9, there's no longer a gap in the range. It takes its place deliberately in the middle of the range which, in Europe, represents more than 30 per cent of the market, or three million vehicles. It has to appeal to the greatest number of people possible and its classical shape answers this

'Abroad even more than in France itself," explains Christian Marin, Renault's product manager, "newness and cleverness for its own sake is not recommended. The R 9 is a family car, conventional but profitable."

The Renault management therefore expects the R 9 to be an international success. From 1982 onwards, it will be huilt at Kenosha, in Wisconsin (U.S.), on the production lines of American Motors, in which Renault is a shareholder. Later, it will also he constructed elsewhere. Production agreements have been negotiated with Taiwan, Spain, Portugal,

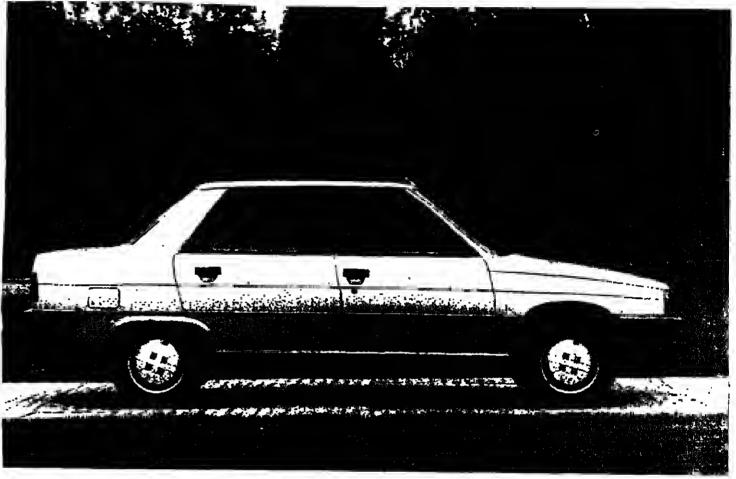

Mexico and South Africa. To set up this giant industrial network, Renault has first of all reorganised its factory at Douai, which, crammed full of automated systems and mbots, has become one of the most technically modern in the world. The painting and welding operations are almost entirely automatic. The R 9 can be fully assembled in 20 hours, compared with 30 hours for any other Renault car. This is one excellent way of cutting production costs. Next, the computerised administration enables as many as eleven versions of the car to be produced, thus personalising it according to the different desires and tastes of French and foreign cli-

The R 9, which has cost oneand-a-half million hours of research and lessing and FF two billion in research and design costs, is a vehicle destined to conquer a big market. Renault expects to produce 2.000 models per day. This should make it the second bestsold car in France, after the R 5 but before the R 18 (another Renault), which at present holds second place.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 21 (R) - Tens of thousands of anti-nuclear protesters gathered here today for what organisers hope will be the largest demonstration ever seen in the Netherlands.

Today's rally, organised largely by the powerful Inter-Church Peace Council (IKV), will back demands for NATO to reverse a 1979 agreement to base 572 medium-range missiles in Western Europe, 48 of which are destined for the Netherlands.

Police raid Al-Zulfikar's Karachi cell, kill terrorist

KARACH1, Nov. 21 (A.P.) - A police inspector and a member of the Kabul-based Al-Zulfikar terrorist group were killed and a police officer wounded during a raid yesterday, on the group's hideout here, police officials said today.

The slain terrorist was identified by authorities as Asad Mohammad who was wanted for the Sept. 25 assassinations of former labour minister Chaudhry Zahnor Elahi and Judge Mushtaq Hussain, who sentenced executed prime minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto to death.

Al-Zulfikar, led by Mr. Bhutto's eldest son Murtaza, is dedicated to the overthrow of President Gen. Mohammed Zia Ul-Haq, who toppled Mr. Bhutto in a 1977 coup. Mr. Bhutto was hanged two years later.

Two other Al-Zulfikar activists were captured unhurt during the shootout at an apartment in Karachi's suburban Liagatabad district, police said. A fourth terrorist managed to escape.

A rifle and automatic weapons were discovered in the apartment, police sources said.

Murtaza Bhutto has publicly claimed credit for the March hijacking of a Pakistani jetliner to Kabul and Damascus during which a young Pakistani diplomat-hostage was killed. The victim had been a military aide to the prime minister at the time of the July 1977 coup and later joined the foreign service.

8-day ban on Aeroflot's U.S. flights

MOSCOW, Nov. 21 (R) -- The Soviet daily Pravda today described President Reagan's eight-day ban on Aeroflot flights to and from the United States as an unjustified and discriminatory measure. The Soviet state airline was served with the ban vesterday as a penalty for overflying restricted military areas in the north-eastern United States during two flights on Nov. 8. Aeroflot told U.S. aviation authorities that a flight from Moscow to Washington had been ordered to change course by air controllers in Canada. An error in an outbound flight error resulted from misinterpretation of a telex order by an Aeroflot agent.

Turkish Consulate in L.A. bombed

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 21 (R) - A bomb exploded at the Turkish Consulate in Los Angeles last night and an Armenian guerrilla group claimed responsibility, police said. Police said the bomb, planted in a hallway outside the consulate on the second floor of an office building, caused serious damage but no casualties. An anonymous telephone caller claimed responsibility for the blast in the name of a group calling itself the Justice Commandos of the Armenian Genocide. Serge Samoniantz, local leader of the Armenian national committee, told reporters yesterday that 2,000 Armenian-Americans would demonstrate against a visit to Los Angeles by Turkey's U.S. ambassador, Sukru Elekdag, next Tuesday.

Mitterrand says he's in good health

PARIS, Nov. 21 (A.P.) - President Francois Mitterrand told reporters yesterday he was in good general health and was taking no medications, not even aspirin. Mr. Mitterrand talked about his state of health before an impromptu gathering of reporters after publications reported he had checked into a military hospital under an assumed name on Nov. 7 and undergone extensive tests. The magazine Paris Match and the mass circulation daily newspaper France-Soir also discussed rumours that have been around for several years that Mr. Mitterrand is suffering from cancer. He said his hospital stay was part of a routine checkup, the results of which would be made public in December. Mr. Mitterrand said he had no idea why his aides checked him into the hospital under an assumed name. He said he walked freely down the halls and greeted several patients.

Chancellor Schmidt's success in persuading a reluctant President Reagan to adopt a "zero option" approach to missile reductions may have dashed Soviet hopes for Mr. Brezhnev's visit.

Western diplomats helieve that because of the imminence of the Geneva negotiations, Mr. Brezhnev is unlikely to offer any fresb concessions during his three-day visit.

West Germany is now Moscow's biggest Western trading par-tner and many diplomats believe Mr. Schmidt has replaced France as a privileged partner for Soviet dialogue with Western Europe. The West Germans sometimes feel uncomfortable in this role, and officials say the positions of the two sides are so far apart on Afghanistan and other East-West problems that it will be hard to agree on a joint communique.

West German officials said the Kremlin, however, insisted on as much of the trappings and ceremonial of a full state visit as possible for Mr. Brezhnev.

Another problem was the need to allow long rest periods for the Soviet president, who will reach Bonn tomorrow night to give him time to prepare for meetings starting on Monday.

According to Western officials who monitor Mr. Brezhnev's hea-1th, he now seems more vigorous than at times during the late 1970s but tends to stick closely to prepared texts in discussions with foreign statesmen.

How Japanese fishermen end up in Siberian prisons

By James Foley

HABOMAI, Japan - Errant Japanese fishermen face fewer days in Siberian prison camps now that the Russians appear to be changing their policy towards violations of their fishing regulations.

Fishermen and government officials here in northern Japan say that the Soviet authorities are finding Japanese fishermen more instead of sending them to prison camps.

Fishermen returning from the camps like the one on Shikotan Island near here complained they did not get enough to eat and that the guards stole from packages sent by their families in Japan.

Takeyashi Kobayashi spent two months on Shikotan after his boat was arrested while fishing within Russia's 18-kilometre territorial limit north of here.

Mr. Kobayashi, 50, is an expert on Siberian prison camps, having been incarcerated in them five times over the past 24 years for a total of just over three years behind bars.

Hundreds like him living on the windy shores of northern Japan have paid a similar price for trespass or for breaking regulations under the 1977 Japan-Russian bilateral fishing treaty. The treaty permits regulated fishing inside designated zones of Russia's 200mile fishing limit.

At one time fishermen went to prison for two or three years, but they are now going for three months to a year, says Kiji Ohya, deputy mayor of the nearby fishing city of Nemuro.

"This year so far 10 ships and 54 fishermen have been captured and two ships and 37 fishermen have been returned." he said of the 10,000 fishermen who work out of Nemuro.

"Two fishermen are also still being held from last year." he added. Local officials said that over the past three years, the number of fishing boats and fishermen arrested by Soviet border guards and fisheries authorities had dropped 50 per cent or more.

Before that the annual average was 30 ships and 200 fishermen. The decline has been matched by an increase in the frequency and size of fines.

"The new problem is that since 1978, the Russians have been imposing heavy fines for alleged illegal fishing," Mr. Ohya said.

That year was a watershed for Japanese-Soviet relations when Tokyo, in defiance of Russian warnings, signed a peace treaty with China. At the same time the Soviet Union hegan militarising islands north of here which are claimed by Japan but which have been occupied by the Soviet Union since 1945.

According to local officials, the Russians in 1978 fined 1g fishermen a total of 40 million yen ($175,000).

Last year they exacted almost twice as much with fines on 41 fishermen.

Fishermen in northern Japan are so worried about being captured by the Russians that they take out "captive insurance" which pays 90 per cent of their fines or compensation for lost wages during imp-

Fishermen returning from prison camps here say that the Russians are not brutal or impleasant in their treatment but that prisoners receive poor food which quickly leads to a deterioration of health.

"If they stay more than six months in prison then their health deteriorates," said Mr. Ohya.

"When they return to Japan they frequently can't immediately return to work they are so unhealthy because of the chance in diet," he added.

He also said that the Russian guards steal cigarettes, food and toilet paper from parcels sent to the Japanese prisoners by their families.

"They say 'this is not for you' and take the stuff away right in front of your eyes" Mr. Kobayashi said.

The fishermen are caught mainly around the four southernmost islands of the Kurile chain claimed by Japan but occupied by Russia.

One of them, the Habomai group of islets which until 1945 was part of this town on the Japanese mainland, is visible from here.

The captured fishermen are taken to Anama bay on Shikotan island, just beyond the Habomai islets, where they are kept in a camp until their cases are heard.

After conviction the prisoners who get prison terms - mainly captains and owners of boats -- are taken to Khabarovsk on the Amur River near the Chinese border where they serve out their terms in a former Japanese prisoner of war camp.
